

Abstract of the Invention

In a multinode data processing system capable of partitioning operations a method is provided for adding nodes to a configuration of nodes in a manner which node quorums are employed but in which two quorum values (ideal and enforced) are employed and in which old nodes using a given file system are distinguished from new nodes. The method prevents even the transient use of inappropriate quorum values.